

God sees you.
He hears your cry.

He is with you in the devastation. He holds you close and whispers His love in your ear. He holds you upright when your heart breaks. He sees the shock, anger, and fear that threaten to overwhelm you. He sees and He cares. He calls you to Himself in the midst of the devastation and promises to be your everything.

He is your bread of life and fountain that never runs dry. He may feed you the bread of affliction, but He is with you in the darkness. He encompasses you and rallies around you and He is for you, not against you. Cling to Him, rely on Him, let Him carry you through.

When the waters of doubt, fear, and anger overwhelm you, know this Truth: God is. He was. And He will be. You can take His faithfulness, steadfastness, and love and build your life on Him. He wants to be the One who handles your fear and anger, and He wants to take the honest, gut-wrenching pain you're feeling and be the truth that sets you free.

Could He have diverted the storm? Yes. Does He still care for you? Absolutely. Does He still love you? Unequivocally. Does He still have good for you? Yes and yes and yes again. He is only good.

He is your rock in the storm.
And He hears your heart.
